Every-day Religion

Religion brightens at home,
Around the fireside near at hand,
On hearts that form the family band.
She asks no gold or silver dress,
So deck her out in fashion's style;
Of meek and courteous words she speaks,
Of contrast to a life of guile.
She looks on grief with mingled tears,
And opens her hand to those who need;

She never hopes suffering by,
For hands that when poor alms they freely Give guards her from all such thing - That little misery-making all
She thinks that slander is a sin.

And never talks about herself.
She shines to live in peace with all,
Forgives where others would resent,
Of courtesy that is great and small,
And with her set in life content.
With reverence all before the Lord,
She worships of his awful throne,
She in this life hath great reward,
And Heaven at last becomes her home!

O. Parker

Sanctification in Affliction

It was midnight hour - a mother knelt Beside her sleeping child
With head bent low upon her hands
She prayed in accents wild

O Father! spare my darling babe
And let this sick babe live!
O cannot part with my dear boy?
O Father, hear my cry!

But as she prayed a sobb'g sigh,
From yonder sky appears;
Of come he with this little one -
Stand mother, dry those tears;

Will live him to his Saviour's breast
From sin and sorrow free;
O mother, put thy trust in Him,
And He will comfort thee;

Then take, said she, this precious gem,
And hold it to thy breast;
O ridged my darling one,
But Mary, I sad, leaves thee!

Some Change

Oh! happy light smile was all which these
A radiance o'er our way,
And as our path were strewn with flowers,
And life an endless day -

Oh! we should have no courage left,
Oh! we should call our own;
For, if we have no trials here,
Our passions are not shown.

Oh! stars, that shine in darkened sky,
You smile at dawn of day -
You smile, though in sunshine bright,
As in warm, beaming rays,

Reason's deep cloud must veil our way,
We can know the truth;
Oh! let our ears and truth come,
While yet we are in youth.

Oh! let us live, that when we're called
To leave this world of gloom,
Our thoughts and deeds may with the light
When we are in the tomb!

He knows what I mean, the brightest of them, the first, the shade, the lightest, the form, the most moves the lightest, the truth is, I cannot find.

Of heart that never knew trouble,
It is, every thing, the heart, the trouble,
Of life, the heart, the heart, the heart,
From the cradle to the urn.

There is a world of glory,
Of the heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart.

From the crystal streams are leading
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart.

Of heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart.

Of heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart.

Of heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart,
The heart, the heart, the heart.

I have I had an angel hand pointing upward "where the many are at rest" (1) through God has called me. First, it will not be long before you too shall see them, our Saviour, and may this be but another step to find your hearts more closely to him.
You have perhaps loved me too well, and may you never hear when an arm of flesh alone.

But how whole hearts to Jesus hath been given;
from which some idol hath not first been won.

Again he hear all the afflictions of the world submission to his will, and you shall at last gain the victory over sin and temptation, and reach on everlasting reward. Tell my father and brother to meet me in Heaven, and let him know that I had looked from earth! Many an eye gazed tearfully upon the fair cheeks, and when again the curtains of night were drawn, and all looked as beautiful as the evening on which she died, they slowly and mournfully changed a stage as her body was lowered down beneath the waves; and there will she rest till the sea shall give up its dead on the resurrection morn.

O, how would I love to have my resting place - my grave in the sea. There is something so free in the thought of being laid in God's keeping - ground. Oh how many millions have been laid there and still there is room. Can we wonder then at the troubled waves - at thy unrest, thou mighty sea?

Allice Westcott

anxiously waiting the moment when they should see the tall mast in the harbor, and mark again their friends they long since parted from.

"We are almost there?" said one pale sufferer resting wearily on his sister's arm. "Oh! if my feet could overleap again of my own loved home, throw my arms around my father's neck, and clasp the flowing form of my darling daughter, I would then again kindly await the summons to go hence, then to be free from all this long war and weakness. But is it not wrong to speak thus? she said: "I would not only say, 'they will be done,' but shut it in my heart! I know that soon the cards that bind me here will be severed, and I would ask that once more I may be carried on deck to look on those waves which will so soon be my winding sheet, and to behold again the silvery light of the moon that will look down so lovingly over my grave!

I need not think, sister, that when I died, I should like to be laid in some quiet spot where the willow boughs would bend mournfully over my grave, and where the flowers I loved in life, would still bloom under the nurturing hand of mother's love! But now I do not feel so; I am making to seek beneath the waves, where the winds shall sing their requiem over my lonely bed.

Oh! how should it sit by the graves of the loved and lost from our early homes, but the musing heart is only there, and you can think of my spirit in heaven! Oh! how mourn not when I am gone; carry me out quickly for the angels are calling me now! Our mother is standing at the portals of heaven with outstretched arms to receive her child! Oh! how a swift-glance

Burial at Sea

The shades of night have gathered over the land, the gleaming sun has hidden his golden beams behind the western sky, and one by one of the "lost-ones" of the angels are fleeing forth from their heavenly homes in the sky, while yonder in the moon, sailing with majesty and splendor through the heavens, now clear as at noonday, and now hiding her face behind some dark misty cloud, hidden for a moment, but looking forth each time with renewed lustre. What a time for calm, deep, holy, thought! There is a wonderful beauty in these moonbeams, falling so gently and so sweetly upon each child of earth. How are the ears of life almost forgotten, as we gaze upward, with the thought arising in our minds, if this misery and is so dear, what must be the splendor of the light shining around the throne of God! Yet even looks down just as brightly on the poor as on the rich; on the palace and the fourched hut, shining midst the branches of the tallest forest-trees; and on the humblest flower, blooming away from the sight of human eye; and what a beautiful thought it is, that the smallest flower can never bloom unheeded or shed its fragrance unregarded, while the eye of God watches over it! And the pale moon looks down too, when the dark bounding with joy and gladness, as when the poor sorrowing ones of earth, come down by tide of grief, which rolls over their heads.

It was on a night like this, that a gallant ship was met gaily bounding over the ocean waves, yet it shed all too slowly for those on board, who were

Strange chants were making a sound
On the vessels deck near day
And rushed in his long long sleep
The form lay sweetly lay
In the still straight line -
In a fair coral cave -
The sailor boy was turned
In his lonely ocean grave
The winds have changed their songs of joy
No requiem for the sailor boy

Bend over thy boy mother
Ours me thou I am old
The rays of the slowly sinking sun
Image the snowy clouds with gold Soft whispers are sighing round me
Dear voices of gentle sound
Oh! lay me beside sweet Sol
On our own church tower ground

Let my father stand beside me
O! fast to meet again
Ours me good-bye in sadness
Each one in our household band
For well we shall meet in gladness
On the distant peaceful land

She made the meanest thing that ever she gave the world to do with

Look up! Look up, O say to all,
O'er-geared ye to despair!
Flying for away upon the winds
The reckoning thoughts of care;
Look not a doubt of what's to come Assail thy trusting heart;
But let thy faith in God and man
Be of thyself a part.

O the waves were jolly singing

The waves were jolly singing
To the night winds solemn moan
At sailor day was dying
On his narrow bed alone
His numbers tears were falling - His heart of home was near
All gentle hand was clapping His in farewell the
The waves have changed their song of joy
So separations for the sailor day

Come to my boy sweet mother
He spoke in a dream of home
Long me a long sweet mother
Of the land where I long to roam
My little sister is calling
Her voice has the old sweet sound
Oh! say me beside sweet sea
On our own church burial ground

Look Up

Look up! Look up, thou troubled one, thy Father is above;
thy heart is filled with kindness, for the children of his love.
Come to him when in sorrow,
And he a balm will send,
To set the aching heart at rest,
To calm the troubled mind.

Look up! Look up, poor orphan child, the whole earth is before thee;
do not let the storms of angry God, that now are breaking over thee.
But place thy hand upon the plough, and press it firmly on;
look not behind, but in ahead,
All that is to be done.

Look up! Look up, lone wounded heart,
Blest of each glad some ray;
Place thy trust in him who dwells
In realms of cloudless day.
Look up, and ask him of the peace
Which nowhere else thou wilt find;
Call him, and he will quickly come,
Thy wounded heart to bind.

Look up! Look up, forsaken one;
Lost faith didst the storm
Dark hours round thy spirit now;
God's religion stream
Look up! He him who dwells above,
The King of Heaven and earth;

O mother, do not weep for me, since we shall meet again.

Little May

Once I heard a mother pray,
At the closing hour of day,
Father let thy angels stay,
Ever, ever little May.

How her soul we in the flowers;
How the sunshine fills her hours;
Back her future? Father, say
Not that it is for little May?

And a low still voice replied
On the quiet rest and made
Seek not to unfold the veil
Ask not what shall win at last

And the mother louder than All reproof, so kindly meant
And her first prayer did say Father watch over little May Oe dand my shrit, as I near The fast conuative those;

I would my mother, thou wilt here;
I seek my hour of me;
When this hath reached you I shall be Beyond the reach of pain!

But I could like dear boys resign,
Almost could welcome death;
Could I but in thy arms recline,
To yield my last breath;
Could I but hear thy blessing now,
On lips dissembling pain;
Or feel thy soft touch on my brow;
Even death might leave its power.

O mother, it is hard to die,
Unhappily, and so young;
So soon beneath the cold to lie,
If not so little done.
But, mother, of thy counsels find I've not forgotful been;
I've shun'd the harms of vice and sin,
Debauchery and wine.

Mother, I am dying now,
For this tide is ebbing fast;
The death darts gather on my brow;
Soon, soon I shall have pass'd
The sea upon whose darkling wave
I dread to launch my bark;
There's something deadlier in the grave,
Of dreary, cold and dark.

FALMOUTH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

FALMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS

Dear Member,

This year we have been following a new pattern of events under the direction of a new program committee with Otis M. Porter, Jr., Chairman.

The first event was called a Saturday Social and occurred on March 16. There was a slide presentation of new and old pictures with comment by your president. This was enthusiastically received and about ninety people came to the Julia Wood House. Unfortunately only about 65 could be seated, so some had to be turned away. There have been many requests for a repeat performance and one may be scheduled later. This lecture on Falmouth's history is much the same as has been given to school children, clubs and other organizations.

On Saturday, June 8, there was a special Open House to show the museums which had been entirely cleaned and rearranged much as they appeared in the March - April issue of Colonial Homes. All across the country people saw the article and we felt sure there would be visitors expecting to see our museums as depicted in the magazine. Although refreshments were served and a notice was mailed out, the attendance of some 30 members was disappointing.

However, on Sunday, July 7, over 200 people came to a Cup Plate Tea, put on in celebration of Barnstable County's Tercentenary. New members were signed up and our cup plates and those of Barnstable County enjoyed brisk sales. Other items such as Katharine Lee Bates illuminated prints and Patriot Lad of Old Cape Cod as well as other books were sold. Music was furnished by Mike Crocco and a trio in the Gazebo and refreshments were served. The grounds and gardens were much admired by all as the Garden Club committees had them in prime condition with many blooms.

On Saturday, July 20, we presented a slide lecture by William F. Robinson, the author of a new book Cape Cod: Henry David Thoreau's Complete Text with the Journey Recreated in Pictures. The publishers, Little Brown and Company, asked the author to describe his book, and the Society arranged to invite all interested people in town to attend and provided the hall. Several societies on the Cape have planned similar events. About 50 people enjoyed the talk and found the pictures very interesting. Otis Porter, our program chairman, planned the event. He exhibited the new book which is one of a distinguished series by the same author. The sale of autographed copies was handled by Bill Banks of the Market Book Shop which will have them for sale. Mr. Banks has generously offered to donate 20% of the receipts for sale of the book to the Society.
